Dear Prof. Tan:

It is a pleasure to accept your manuscript entitled "Non-invasive prenatal diagnosis using foetal DNA in maternal plasma: A preliminary study for identification of paternally-inherited alleles using single nucleotide polymorphisms" in its current form for publication in BMJ Open. Any final comments from the reviewer(s) are included at the foot of this letter. These will be published as supplementary information alongside your article.

All accepted papers are reviewed for their media potential by our PR office within two weeks of acceptance. If your paper is selected for press release by the journal, we will let you know within this timeframe.

Once your article is published online you will be able to keep track of usage. Each article published in BMJ Open has individual usage statistics which are updated daily and can be accessed from the Article Usage Statistics link in the Services section of the right hand column on each page of the article. In this column you can also sign up to be alerted about any e-letter responses to your article.

Thank you for your contribution, and we hope that you will continue to submit to the journal in future.

Sincerely,
Richard Sands
Managing Editor, BMJ Open
