Intermittent respiratory obstruction secondary to a solitary fibrous tumour.
Shashinder S, Kuliit S, Rahmat O, Usha DA, Gopala GK
Department of Otorhinolaryngology, Faculty of Medicine, University Malaya, Kuala Lumpur 50603, Malaysia.

Abstract
There have been fourteen cases of solitary fibrous tumour reported as originating from the paranasal sinuses. Here we report a case of solitary fibrous tumour that involved the right nasal cavity with extension into the oropharynx causing stertor and intermittent respiratory obstruction. Histopathology examination revealed the tumour cells expressed CD34 tumour marker.

PMID: 17243534 [PubMed - indexed for MEDLINE]

Publication Types, MeSH Terms, Substances

LinkOut - more resources